Mark Comparisons

Manufacturing

This mark is successful because it is simple enough to be memorable and is representative. The manner in which the designer was able to represent the M of manufacturing and the W of works while sill creating an attractive overall mark is great. It is scalable, works without the words and fits the targeted audience.

Non-profit

This mark is successful because it is simplistic, making it scalable. The image immediately conveys the mission of the non-profit. They are a group that helps bring solar energy to schools and educates students about this new industry. The color palette is in line with their environmentally conscious nature and having the words Shared Power in a bolder font also aids in conveying what the group is all about.

Professional

Evolve is a marketing agency located in Akron Ohio. Being a marketing firm, this mark is a good representation of what they do. The bold color is eye-catching, using lower case letters and then switching to upper-case in the nicely kerned “marketing” not only looks clean and modern, but also demonstrates an evolution. Using the “o” as a phase of the moon is clever and the way it is cut along the bias of the “v” gives it movement.

Retail

Square Records is a record store located in the Highland Square neighborhood in Akron Ohio. This mark is an excellent mark for the business because it is a record, it is distressed (they sell used materials), and it clearly has the name of the store incorporated, It is well balanced and looks good on a t-shirt.

Service

Everything that the Nightlight does graphic design wise, I am a fan of. The mark of this local independent theatre in Akron Ohio, is done in black and white and in an Art Deco style. It conveys class and a bygone era. That represents that The Nightlight began as a single screen theatre and old school Hollywood glam. The lettering is clean and easily readable.

Manufacturing

This mark is unsuccessful because the letters are all of a strange weight and have odd shapes. The name of the business is too small to be read when at a small size. The mark give the viewer to hint as to what the business does and the target audience is not obvious.

Non-profit

The aim of the designer to create a cat within the mark is obvious but it can be done better. The use of the bone as the letter l doesn't totally make sense since its meant to represent a cat. The pink in the mark doesn't make sense for a pet rescue.

Professional

This mark looks fake. It looks like it was created by AI or someone found it on a stock image page. The use of highlights and shadows is all over the place, it has a stroke on the shape behind the paw and a strange drop shadow behind the paw as well. It seem as if it were meant to look sophisticated and upscale but fails.

Retail

This mark is trying to say the most. It is on a narrow banner and includes the web address, a barn logo, the name of the business, the two locations, and what stands out the most is the call to “savor the experience”. Barns have been known to be red but that does not mean that red is the only color available.

Service

This mark fails on all levels. The weight of the line around the plate varies, the image in the center is a complete mystery. The spacing of the letters is not good. Some color would help to convey creativity and a better overall balance would benefit this mark as well.
